I often kept my hair up because I was surrounded by people with very straight hair, even in my family, so I just became really insecure about it, but embraced through the years. I don't know, from whatever I need.

It made me mad because there were a lot of great reviews but it didn’t work on my hair.

I don't remember, but it was a curler set that would give you wavy hair in the early 2000s.

I started caring what kind of shampoo I use, and I started wearing my hair differently. Wavy
Female 15
It makes girls more confident. I feel this way because with different hair commercials they include all different types, styles, and colors of hair. Hair is something people use to express themselves.
In the media, hair = beauty. I feel this way because there's always social media posts of new hairstyles to try and different celebrities are always changing their hair, influencing other people. Because hair is thought of as a good thing and everyone wants to have good hair. Because hair is different in all different forms.
Not many people have my hair, but I don't think it affects me. It is seen as an ideal of beauty but only a specific type of hair is seen in a positive aspect. it is seen as an ideal of beauty but only a specific type of hair is seen in a positive aspect.
Because it's portrayed as a way to make you feel more confident and look the way you want.
